TIME TO RELAX

After the stressful events of wedding planning, you and your new husband deserve some time to enjoy starting your life as a married couple! The most important thing to keep in mind is you will get to enjoy time together and relax. Think about the type of honeymoon you and your fiancé have always dreamed about. Think about what you want to do on your honeymoon, what climate and region you want.

CHOICES TO CONSIDER

Traditionally it has been the job of the fiancé to plan the honeymoon, sometimes as a surprise destination; however, more and more brides are beginning to be a part of the honeymoon planning process. Working with a travel agent is a great way to save money through special deals only travel agents get, as well as cut down on some of the stressful details. Keep in mind it is important to choose a destination that both of you will enjoy! Although it is customary to leave for your honeymoon the day after your wedding, consider delaying this a day. Your wedding day will be extremely tiring, so give yourselves a day to recover from the festivities. You won't be able to fully enjoy your wedding reception or wedding night knowing you have to be at the airport for a 5am flight!

ALL-INCLUSIVE RESORTS

These resorts generally include food and lodging, extensive recreational facilities and equipment, ground transportation and other amenities and services. This is a nice option as you won't have to worry about paying as you go, you just pay one price and forget about everything else but each other. Be sure to check for any hidden costs such as alcoholic beverages, taxes and gratuity.

CRUISES

Most cruise packages are all inclusive, offering all meals and limited amenities for one price, sometimes including airfare as well. This is a great way to see several locations! Expect to have to pay extra for drinks as well as on-shore excursions. Be sure to check new passport regulations regarding cruises; and pack some Dramamine!

LOCAL OPTIONS

Turn off the cell phone and enjoy a romantic get-away that is close to home. Consider a quaint bed and breakfast, a posh downtown hotel or a spa retreat!
